

SHOT HANDGUNS

In 2020 shot pistols and revolver cover the range from the almost harmless to the utterly lethal. The smallest of them are short-ranged self-defense weapons, unlikely to harm innocent bystander through a thin wall or a loose bullet. And their short barrels means a quick shot dispersion, increasing the probability to score a hit even with little or no skill. Their most serious drawback is their lack of effectiveness against armor, unless you load them with specialty rounds (that are often of dubious legality).

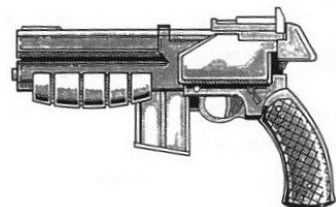

The larger are rated along with sawed-off shotguns, meaning that you need some paperwork in order to simply buy them. And forget carrying.

It's often the simplest ideas that works best. Designers at Eagletech probably had this in mind when they created this self-defense weapon, which is little more than a plastic pipe loaded with a single 20-gauge shell. It can be loaded with non-lethal rounds. The most serious drawback is the short life of the weapon, the barrel breaking definitively approximatively 1 in 5 shots...
